Applied Behavioral Analysis: Effective Interventions for a Variety of Disorders Amongst Children, Adults, Couples, and Families

Applied behavior analysis (ABA) is a type of behavior analysis that uses the theory of behaviorism to modify human behaviors as part of teaching new behaviors or treatment process. Behavior analysts focus on the observable relationship of behavior to the environment. The methods of ABA can be used to change observable behaviors impacting children and adult relationships.

Objective One: Understand how your clients learn and process the therapy methods we share by examining their learning behavior's visual, auditory, tactile, kinesthetic, or olfactory dominances.

Objective Two: Benefits of using written documentation of our client's behaviors resulting in immediate, beneficial changes to their relationships by tracking baselines, scatter plots, and time recordings.

Objective Three: Teaching our clients the use of visual schedules to maintain therapy methods or skills they're applying outside of therapy sessions.

Objective Four: How to analyze and implement behavioral changes using the ABC model while correctly applying either external or internal reinforcements when desired behaviors occur.

"PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE" -DOREEN VAN LEEUWEN

Dear Colleagues:

Happy New Year! We at the Board wish you all an abundant and prosperous 2013, filled with relationship-building moments, stimulating events, comforting memories, just enough work and plenty of playful leisure.

Life happens right in the middle of our plans, doesn't it? The unexpected death of my husband Theo has catapulted me in a myriad of directions I wasn't expecting! Even though the pain and loss are great, I have been surrounded by love, support, concern, cards, flowers, meals, phone calls, visits, and untold offers of help, which have made the hurt bearable. I appreciate the patience and support of our Board, and the care so many of you have extended to me.

One lesson I am learning from this is the importance of resilience as part of our ability to cope with trauma and loss. Resilience is what gives us stamina, endurance, staying power. This reinforces my belief that while I can't control everything that happens, what I do have the power over is my self-care. How well I am in the midst of loss, chaos, uncertainty and accelerated change says much about my self-care before, during and after.

How can I begin to describe for you my gratitude for the relationships built with people like you, in organizations like IE-CAMFT, because these connections console, nurture and inspire me to continue on. This is one vital piece of therapist self-care that helps to "sharpen the saw" as Stephen Covey writes about in The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People.

Taking time daily to see to our personal overall health is smart. I urge you to identify, and then do ONE action that you will repeat for the next 30 days that will add to your well-being. Not only will you feel better for doing it, but you then become a living, breathing model of the habits you want others to embrace. There is nothing more powerful than personal testimony, is there?

So take this moment to clarify the action you are willing to embrace to amp up your wellness.

➤ Write it here:

I will do this for the next 30 days to the best of my ability.

➤ Sign and date here:

Put it on your calendar. Practice and repetition solidify a habit, and help us overlay and replace undesirable habits.

Now go ahead, and do it!

Then, come to me at the next meeting and tell me about your plan. I would love to hear about the steps you are taking to build your resilience. You just never know when you might need it!!

Love and blessings to all,

Doreen Van Leeuwen

"AT OUR LAST IE-CAMFT MEETING..."
-JANELL GAGNON

In our October IE-CAMFT meeting we had the pleasure of hearing from Carol Teitlebaum, LMFT and three courageous sexual abuse survivors, Randy, Daniel (Danny), and Scott about how "it happens to boys too." Often when we think of abuse, especially sexual abuse, we think of girls being the victims. However, the amount of boys who are sexually abused is astonishing. Carol first educated us about sexual abuse and gave us some interesting statistics; and then we got to hear from the three sexual abuse survivors. So here's some of the shocking statistics:

- 1 in 4 girls are sexually abused
- 1 in 6 boys are sexually abused
- Only 10% of sexual abuse cases are even reported. This is scary to think the numbers are so high, and that's just based on the 10% that's reported!
- 90% of sexual abuse victims know their perpetrators; 34% of perpetrators are family members; only 7% of perpetrators are strangers to the victims.
- Perpetrators will "groom" their victims for up to 4 years.
- Most sexual abuse happens between the ages of eight and ten years old.

While the statistics are shocking and disturbing, it is necessary to know just how prevalent sexual abuse is, especially because of the ongoing, pervasive symptoms and distress it causes in the victim's lives. The majority of sexual abuse victims suffer ongoing life distress including relationship problems, difficulty with intimacy, difficulty trusting others, anger and rage, and addictions. Hearing from Randy, Danny, and Scott about their abuse, struggles, and recovery process really put these difficulties into perspective so a brief synopsis of their stories follows.

Randy's story is one that reminds us that just because a family looks like a loving, "picture perfect" family from the outside, does not mean it is. Randy lost his biological father to cancer at about 12 years old. Though Randy's mother and her boyfriend painted the "picture perfect family" for outsiders, inside the home their family was far from perfect. The picture that outsiders saw when they viewed Randy's family was a born-again Christian family, with his mother singing in the church choir and his mom's boyfriend being a "good church member." Inside the home there was a wide variety of abuse including domestic violence, physical abuse, mental abuse, emotional abuse and sexual abuse, with Randy's mother and her boyfriend having sex in front of the kids often. Even with all the abuse, Randy learned to view his mother's boyfriend as his father figure because every young boy needs a father figure. In retrospect, Randy can remember when the "grooming" began. The boyfriend would give him all kinds of presents and material things. Then shortly after his biological father's death, at the age of 12, the sexual abuse began and continued until the age of 16. Randy was told not to say anything because it was "their secret." When Randy did decide to talk to people in the community about the abuse no one believed him because everyone saw the "picture perfect family."

Danny came from a very different family than Randy. Danny describes his family as dysfunctional, full of alcoholism and addiction. However, his abuse did not come from a family member; his perpetrators were his neighbors. The abuse started when Danny was about 5-6 years old and went on for about 1 year. Danny's neighbors would catch him playing in the neighborhood or walking home from school. Danny remembers the abuse being brutal and pleading for them to stop. Danny never told anyone about the abuse because his perpetrators told him they would kill his family if he said anything. So Danny didn't say anything...for 35 years. Danny has now been in recovery for 13 years, and it took him 30 years to get those 13 years of recovery.

The third survivor we heard from, Scott, again had a different family and story. Scott was raised by his mom because his dad worked nights and slept during the days. Scott was the youngest of 5 kids, and described his family as loud, rough and tough, just as one would imagine a household with 5 kids would be. As the youngest, Scott was always getting picked on by his older siblings. Scott's perpetrator was his own older brother, and the abuse began around 8 years old. Scott described his older brother taking him into their parent's room where it was nice and quiet. Scott didn't think of it as abuse because it was nice and quiet and he was made to feel useful instead of getting picked on. For Scott, another tough realization came to him not too long ago when he got a call from his niece of the brother who sexually abused him. Scott's niece was calling him to report that her brother was sexually abusing her. That call made everything really come full circle for Scott because he realized that it runs in his family.

Daniel said it the best when he said that while all these men have different stories, all the emotions are the same. All the survivors we heard from described a life of battling with addictions and having intimate problems with their partners. They suffer from feelings of rage, and some labeled themselves as "rage-a-holics." All of these men described having strong hatred towards themselves, and having difficulty knowing who they are. They all had to and are still in the process of learning how to love themselves again. And all of the effects described above are described very mildly in general terms.

Knowing the pervasive effects that sexual abuse causes to its victims, and how many cases are not reported, it's important to know what to look for in possible victims.

Some (but not all) of the non-verbal signs that are important to look for are:

- Youth who avoid eye contact
- Youth with slumped body posture
- Youth wearing very big, baggy clothes
- Youth who don't take showers or take very long showers
- Cutting

While sexual abuse survivors benefit from individual therapy, all the men we heard from said that group therapy work is what has helped their healing process the most. For youth, play therapy, especially sand tray therapy, has been found to be especially helpful for sexual abuse victims.

We would like to thank Carol, Randy, Danny, and Scott again for their unique and educational presentation about how sexual abuse happens to boys too. Hearing from Randy, Danny and Scott about their stories and road to recovery brought a completely different perspective to the topic of sexual abuse against boys. Carol and a handful of male sexual abuse survivors have worked hard to bring awareness to this topic and create more help and support for survivors.

THEO SMITH, IE-CAMFT SUPPORTER &
NEWSLETTER PUBLISHER

IN MEMORY OF THEODORE ROBERT SMITH

Theodore Robert Smith was born on August 29th, 1940 and passed away November 25th, 2012. He was raised in Denver, CO by parents Lewis G. Smith and Evelyn J. Johnston-Smith. His family relocated to India when he was 16, where he attended Vincent Hill Boarding School for missionary children in Masuri, for a year. It was here that he met and developed a crush on Sharon Crider, whom he followed to Pacific Union College, in California.

Their relationship continued even though she transferred to La Sierra University in Riverside. Theo completed his Bachelor's degree in Mathematics at PUC, began a PhD program at Stanford U, but changed his mind and transferred to University of California, Riverside. He jokingly described how he raised his low GPA in math going into UCR by majoring in Physics, and ultimately earned Masters' degrees in Mathematics and Physics. He married his high school sweetheart Sharon and they settled in La Sierra.

Theo dedicated thirty years to his career as a mathematician working in a civil service for the Navy, nearly all of that performed at in Corona. He had a brief second career working as a systems analyst for Inland Empire Foods. In the late sixties, he began a prolific avocation as an artist, and placed in a number of juried shows. His works, both acrylic on canvas, or acrylic on sculpted sheet metal showed off his mathematical precision, fascination with optical illusion, and intrigue with visual representations of random number theory.

In his late thirties, after the end of his first marriage, he developed a new passion: cultivating bamboo. His second wedding to Marilyn Smith (now Carpenter) took place in the lower back yard, which he lovingly dubbed "The Cathedral". His creative juices turned to landscaping, and further classes at UCR earned him the title of Master Gardener. He knew each of the 120+ varieties present in his "Bamboo Haven" by their scientific name and loved to wax eloquent on his garden to the interested listener. He traveled the state in search of new plants and served in various capacities on the Board of Directors of the Southern California chapter of the American Bamboo Society.

In 1990 he took up square and round dancing, and he faithfully published the "Bachelors N' Bachelorettes" Redlands Chapter newsletter for 20 years.

On June 13th, 1998, he remarried for the third and final time and acquired a family in the process. Theo met Doreen Van Leeuwen via a video dating service, and became "Number Two Dad" to her three daughters. Theo became very interested in Imago Relationship Couples Theory as a consequence Doreen's training, and she groomed him into a wonderful partner in dialogue ;). He became a profound listener and loved summarizing in metaphor. On their journey together, they found ways through the dialogue to continue to love, respect and uphold one another, even in their biggest differences.

Another of Theo's favorite pastimes was pondering the unanswerable mysteries of life. We are now comforted by the thought of him dialoguing with God, and we imagine God saying, "Well, now, that's a very unique perspective. I've never quite thought of it that way."

One of the ways Theo showed his love was to walk Doreen to the car each time she left for work, the gym, or to run errands. She will miss those hugs and kisses, and the way he kept waving goodbye until she turned the corner. Now it's our turn to wave goodbye to our dearest Theo as he turns the corner into the new reality that awaits each of us. "Goodbye, Theodorable...your place in our hearts is permanent."

IE-CAMFT collected nearly $400 worth of new toys at our holiday event held on December 7, 2012. The toys were donated to the Family Service Association of Redlands, an organization dedicated to supporting low-income and homeless families in the community. Donations of food and new/gently used goods are accepted all year round. For more information, contact Family Service at (909) 793-2673 or online at www.redlandsfamilyservice.org.
