Note: The 09:00 am meeting time gives time to deliver kids to school, etc., since many of our members have that responsibility. Promptness is urged and presence required during the two hour presentation to earn your 2 CEUs.

IE-CAMFT Mission Statement:

We are professional visionaries dedicated to providing training, networking, and advocacy for Marriage and Family Therapists to promote healthy individual, and couple and family relationships.

President's Message:

When a couple enters my office, one of my goals is to help them "get" that their relationship - the "we" or "us" part of their connection- exists as a third entity even though it can't be "seen" with our eyes.

One time I'll use the analogy of each person being a stream of life and energy that flows into existence. When the two decide to "become as one," each stream intertwines with the other and a pool starts forming.

This pool becomes home to all the life forms that the couple spawns, many of which will depend on the health of these two life streams for their survival. What happens if one or both streams are polluted? Or one of the streams gets redirected? What will happen when one or both dry to a trickle?

Another time, I compare the "space between" to garden that each person is a steward for. Neither one is more responsible than the other for the care of the space. But the space absolutely requires the energy and effort of both in order to thrive! That both have to take part in the care and feeding of the space is non-negotiable.

Lots of couples tell me how atrophied the garden has become, due to lack of care. When I ask about date nights, couples give me a blank stare or they sheepishly laugh as they struggle to remember the last time they had fun together. The majority of couples I interview report that they do not schedule regular quality time together.

Small surprise that the joy and fun has disappeared; that it's now painful to be together, and that they begin to look elsewhere for ways to sustain themselves!

So it is with our chapter! Our organization is organic, nourished by the talents and resources of all its participants. We need each one of you, whether you send in a check for dues once a year and show up a few times, or you serve as chairperson of one of our committees. Each part contributes to the well-being of the whole.

As the chapter grows, so do the tasks and roles to keep it vibrant and meaningful. That's why it's so gratifying when a new attendee, like Angie Moxey, gets excited about what we are doing, and not only pays her dues for membership, but jumps in with both feet to help with Membership and Event planning. Thank you Angie!

And remember, it is so helpful when you sign up for even the smallest role, because "many hands make light work". Your volunteer efforts, whatever they are, combined together, become the life-sustaining energy force that our chapter needs. When we volunteer, we are rewarded in two ways: from the joy of giving to something greater than ourselves, and in the enjoyment of receiving from that entity.

We welcome your Gifts and I personally thank each and every one of you for helping make our Chapter grow and thrive!

Love and hugs,

- Doreen Van Leeuwen, LMFT

Nutrition Information provided by Robin Allen:

Mood and Brain Boosting Foods: Proper diet and nutrition plays a very significant role in the health and well-being of the clients you serve. A person's food intake affects mood, behavior and brain function. On many levels the "Standard American Diet" often robs our bodies of our natural feel-good chemistry. It's important that we focus our attention on feeding ourselves powerful mood and brain boosting foods so that we thrive and minimize moodiness, agitation and the anxiousness that so many often experience.

A number of mood and brain boosting foods are listed below:

Fatty Fish: Seafood like salmon, albacore tuna, mackerel, and sardines are packed with omega-3 fatty acids, powerful and versatile nutrients that are essential for a healthy mind.

Leafy Green and Cruciferous Veggies: This includes broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, kale, bok choy, and Brussels sprouts. They're filled with antioxidants like vitamin C and plant compounds called carotenoids, which are particularly powerful brain protectors.

Asparagus: This vegetable is one of the top plant-based sources of tryptophan, which serves as a basis for the creation of serotonin, one of the brain's primary mood-regulating neurotransmitters.

Avocado, Oils, Nuts, and Seeds: They all contain the important antioxidant vitamin E. In one study, researchers found that people who consumed moderate amounts vitamin E from food, lowered their risk of ADD by 67%.

Dark Chocolate: Dark chocolate (at least 70% cocoa) contains flavonoids, another class of antioxidants that some research links to brain health.

Berries: Research indicates these antioxidant powerhouses may protect your brain.

Mussels: Mussels are loaded with some of the highest naturally occurring levels of brain-protecting vitamin B12.

Discover more in depth information on mood and brain boosting foods as well as other key nutrition secrets and resources that will not only help your clients, but will make a positive impact on your health, wellness and nutrition. IE-CAMFT Meeting August 24, 2012

In our August IE CAMFT meeting, we had the pleasure of hearing from Joy Nussen Timsit, licensed Marriage and Family Therapist for 21 years, as well as the founder and executive director of EquineWorks. Joy educated us on Equine Assisted Psychotherapy (EAP), which is the practice of utilizing horses experientially for mental health treatment and human development. Joy is certified by the internationally recognized Equine Assisted Growth and Learning Association (EAGALA), which has over 3,500 members in 40 countries and now over 500 EAGALA programs.

Joy founded Equine Works Inc. in 2009 to provide innovative psychotherapy services through incorporating horses into the therapy sessions. Through a series of non-riding activities, a skilled team consisting of a mental health professional and equine specialist identifies unique behaviors and patterns displayed by a client during their interactions with a horse.

While other animals have been used in the helping professions, there are a number of benefits in using horses. Horses live in families or herds like humans, which allows for metaphoric opportunities. Horses also have very distinct personalities, moods and attitudes, which allows clients to use different approaches for different horses because, like humans, what works for one horse may not work for another. The main benefit of using horses for therapy that is unique to horses is that they are prey animals rather than predator animals. Because horses are prey animals, they have an exceptional ability to read non-verbal behavior. This exceptional ability allows horses to act as silent therapists, as they mirror the client's non-verbal behavior forcing clients to change their thoughts, attitudes, and behaviors to get different results in the sessions. EAP sessions can take place with little or no talking, which allows humans to get past the cognitive barriers of speech.

EAP is an experiential modality by nature due to the learning through interaction with the horses. The interactions and reflections of EAP offer the client metaphors for the challenges in their own lives. EAP therapists find that offering metaphors often leads to less defensiveness, and re-directing focus onto the horse reduces or eliminates power struggles. Through EAP, clients:

- Identify current beliefs and attitudes
- Must practice new strategies to achieve goals (learn through trial and error)
- Can access kinesthetic learning
- Experience and work through the unknown because each experience and solution is unique to the client and the horse

IE-CAMFT Meeting August 24, 2012, Continued-1

A great value of EAP is the wide variety of populations it can benefit. The research suggests that EAP can benefit clients of almost all ages, with almost any problem or symptom ranging from depression to substance abuse to PTSD. The only populations that may not benefit from EAP are clients younger than 3 years old and clients suffering from psychosis. EAP can also be beneficial for group/team work for business and workforces such as units of firefighters or corporations who need to work more closely together.

While it is not required for therapists practicing EAP to be certified with an organization such as EAGALA; such certification is legally and ethically suggested because organizations such as EAGALA provide evidenced-based frameworks to work from. Joy works in the SPUD'S framework. EAGALA developed SPUD'S framework to guide EAGALA certified therapists as to what to focus on:

- S- Shifts: Therapists look for shifts in the horses behaviors.
- P- Patterns: Shifts with humans; something that keeps repeating with humans and horses. Ex: The client trying to use the same techniques with the horse over and over again despite them not working.
- U- Unique: Something that stands out with the humans and/or horses
- D- Discrepancies: Saying one thing and doing or feeling something different. The horses pick up on this right away because what is said does not matter with the horses!
- 'S- Our stuff: Awareness of our counter-transference, which is always a must in any type of psychotherapy

By using the SPUD'S framework, EAP therapists can ensure they are using the horses to their full potential and focusing on what is necessary to benefit the clients in the therapy sessions.

We would like to thank Joy Nussen for introducing us to Equine Assisted Psychotherapy. EAP is a unique, evidence-based therapy modality that can benefit a wide variety of populations. It offers a broad spectrum of benefits, especially for those for whom "traditional" psychotherapy has not been successful.

If you have any questions about EAP or would like more information, please contact Joy Nussen by email at joynussen@equineworks.com or at 949-422-6355. You can also visit www.equineworks.com or www.EAGALA.org These websites include photos and videos of EAP in action.

Thank you again Joy for your interesting and educational presentation about EAP!

All the benefits listed to the left arise from, shall we say, “just showing up.” It has been said that for much of life, half the job is “just showing up.” This might be characterized as the passive approach to involvement with IE-CAMFT. However, even more benefits are available through active involvement. Active means volunteering your time, talents, and energies by following through after enthusiastically saying YES to answering the following question:

Will you support IE-CAMFT by volunteering to fill one or more of its organizational roles?

Contact Doreen to increase your activity with our board. The board position of President-Elect is open. Committees such as Hospitality, Membership, and Trauma Network need added leadership and participation.

Now, you get the benefits for active IE-CAMFT participation: Increased self esteem and connection in the relationship healing community. Participation at these levels make nice line items in one’s resume showing yourself to be an action oriented, dynamic citizen vs a plodding worker bee or job holder. I bet you can name some more benefits. Give it a try!

My boyfriend and I broke up. He wanted to get married, and I didn’t want him to.

Marrying a man is like buying something you've been admiring for a long time in a shop window. You may love it when you get it home, but it doesn’t always go with everything else in the house.
